

Adult Day Programs

Adult programs provide a variety of services including recreational and social activities, meals, personal care, physical and occupational therapy and counseling. Some adult day care programs specialize in caring for frail, older adults in need of supervision. Often times, Adult Day Programs can provide respite to caregivers who simply need a break during the week. There are two types of adult day care programs: Social and Medical.

Social Adult Day Care

Social adult day care provides social interactions, activities and meals in a supervised setting. Although social programs do not have medical care, staff in Social Day Programs maintain close contacts with the participant's caregiver in order to report observed changes in physical, mental or emotional condition.
